PARAGRAPHS.

An actor fell through a loose trap as he was leaving the stage. Emerging instantly afterwards, he was met with a hearty laugh and the remark of a wag, "I am sorry to see you descend to such claptrap manevres as that." "Yes," was the quick reply, "but you'll admit that I never undertake anything without going through."

That Baltimore man's dying machine is not an overwhelming success; Keeley's motor is as quiet as the grave; Virginia has refused to take part in the Centennial; but a German chemist has obtained tetrocyanide of tetraethyl ammonium by saturating ferricyanide acid with tetraethyl ammonium hydrate—and this is some consolation, anyhow.—Newspaper Herald.
